Play better Chess, courtesy of Windows 7's much improved casual games offerings Microsoft has overhauled its casual games offerings with Windows 7, giving users the chance to play improved, online versions of games such as Chess and Backgammon. Microsoft's consumer product manager for Windows Parri Munsell has outlined the numerous improvements in the free, casual games that ship with Windows 7 in a recent interview, explaining how games such as Chess are both fully internet-enabled and feature a quick matchmaking system to find you buddies online to play with at your level. Munsell told CasualGaming.biz that Microsoft will have "a bunch of new casual games that will be built into Windows 7 Home Premium" in addition to the perennial favourite Solitaire. "You'll also be able to play the likes of Backgammon and Chess. And many of these games are fully internet enabled, with a quick matchmaking system so you can play with someone else in other parts of the world. And these are built-in games." The Game Explorer Windows 7 features an area called the Game Explorer, which the Microsoft man explains "is really neat, because whenever you install a game it goes into this area so you can find your games really easily. [Plus] it also allows publishers to highlight updates for their games, be it DLC or bug fixes." "Previously you'd normally have to go to the publisher or developers website, and find the details and the right versions. It's not easy, and you have to keep checking the updates. But in Game Explorer, publishers can put in a notification and a quick button that allows consumers to update their games instantly." Touch control is obviously a big selling point for game developers and publishers making casual titles for use on Windows 7 PCs. "A lot of our partners will be coming out with multi-touch PCs at Window 7's launch, and these PCs are capable of recognising one, two, three, four or even five touch points on your screen at any one time, depending on the technology they use," explained Fannell. "Windows 7 has touch built into its DNA...[and] what's really exciting is games developers are taking advantage of this touch mechanics." You can learn the chess rules here! Select to play as either the black or white chess pieces from the chess setup — white always moves first. The first move is performed by the Pawn or the Knight. Knights are the only pieces allowed to jump over others in the whole chess set and do so by moving out two squares and across one on the chess board. In chess, the pawn is free to move forward two squares on the opening move, however, it can only progress one square forward at a time after that. Also, it can only attack in a forward, diagonal direction. After this opening to the chess game, the objective is to get the rest of your chess pieces out to attack the opponent's King, while simultaneously protecting your own. The other pieces are free to move across the chess set in the following ways: Bishops can move in any diagonal direction in an unlimited number of available chess board spaces. Rooks can do the same, but in any non-diagonal direction on the chess board. In chess, Queens (your most valuable piece in chess) can move in any direction in an unlimited number of available spaces. Kings can move in any direction, however, only one square at a time on the chess board. In chess, once the King is threatened, it is placed in "check." The player with the King in danger must use the next move to either move it on the chess board, attack the threatening chess pieces, or block it to get out of "check." Failure to do so could signal the end of the chess game with the King being placed in "checkmate," meaning that it is impossible to avoid an attack on the King and the player who places the King in this position wins the game of chess online. Fun Facts about Chess - The longest a chess game could possibly be is 5,949 moves. - The first chess board setup with light and dark alternating squares was used in Europe in 1090. - In Chess, the term "Checkmate" derives from the Persian phrase "Shah Mat", meaning "the King is dead". - It is estimated that over 600 million people play chess online and around the world. - Magnus Carlsen of Norway is the current world chess champion. Try chess online for free today and begin your journey to the World Chess Championship! Chess is having a moment. The centuries-old analog game has found new life online, and it hasn't just grown in popularity — it's exploded. As people turn toward digital entertainment amid the pandemic, and game streaming becomes ubiquitous, it's reaching more people than ever. Hikaru Nakamura, 32, is an American chess grandmaster, chess streamer, and one of the figures leading this renaissance. You can find Nakamura, aka GM/Hikaru, on Twitch any given weeknight, listening to chill beats and schooling haters at the king's game. Hikaru Nakamura / Photo courtesy of TSM e-sports Nakamura is a bona fide chess prodigy. At 15, he became one of the youngest Americans to reach the title of grandmaster. He's now 32 and is thinking of leaving the traditional world of over-the-table (OTB) chess behind to stream full-time. An average Nakamura stream can see up to 10,000 viewers at a time. His online presence reached a new height at the end of August 2020. He was recruited by TSM, one of the largest streaming teams active today. "Chess has remained popular on Twitch, and when we looked into it further, Hikaru is the reason why," Leena Xu, President of Esports for TSM, said in a statement. "Hikaru is able to engage with the Twitch community in an authentic way, and his mission of expanding chess's audience really resonates with TSM." Nakamura, in a video about joining TSM, said that "one thing I really want to do, is whomever I represent, try to bring home titles, bring home trophies. And I feel that my best opportunities to do that will be at TSM." Hikaru's HYPE Announcement - TSM!! Xu said that with most tournaments moving online due to COVID-19, the chess community will only continue to grow. This is a huge change from how the chess community worked a couple decades ago. Before the internet, chess thoughts, strategies, and gameplay tactics were collected in books or magazines and would come out periodically. "In the old days, if you wanted to know what a grandmaster was thinking you'd have to read about it," says Joshua Anderson, a 45-year-old chess journalist and teacher. In 1993, the game saw a resurgence with the release of the movie

Searching for Bobby Fischer. This was reinforced by the man-versus-machine matchup of chess grandmaster Garry Kasparov and IBM’s Deep Blue supercomputer. Suddenly, chess was no ancient game, but a sophisticated, modern measure of intelligence. Chess.com and streaming reach a new audience Chess.com became the go-to destination for online chess games just as Twitch saw its own rise to popularity, presenting the chance to consolidate the Chess community. According to Nick Barton, the director of business development at Chess.com, the website saw streaming as an ideal way to create a community around the game. Chess.com started its own Twitch channel and made deals to build out more channels for casual chess fans. These streams would go on to attract between 100 and 500 concurrent watchers. Followers for Chess.com’s Twitch channel grew from 73,000 in late 2016 to 110,000 in October 2018. As of October 2020, it has more than 350,000. The collaboration between Chess.com and Twitch started small. They worked together on features like emotes in the channels, and graphical support during streams. Slowly but steadily, it mushroomed. Followers for Chess.com’s channel grew from 73,000 in late 2016 to 110,000 in October 2018. As of October 2020, it has more than 350,000. The pandemic drove the largest growth ever on Chess.com. That’s not just because people are staying home. Streamers like Chessbrah, a group of masters who stream together on one channel, or Ludwig, who listens to electronic music and has a breezy personality. Or, of course, Nakamura himself. There’s a whole online subculture that lives on Reddit, and in memes. Some streamers have changed the vernacular of the game, calling a knight “the horsey piece” or calling a discovered check “a fossil.” Younger players are making the game fresh. Image courtesy of TSM e-sports Chess.com Barton believes chess is popular on Twitch for the same reason as Super Mario Bros. speedruns. It’s a nostalgia thing. Many gamers remember playing chess as a child, and now they can watch it being played by their favorite streamers. Chess.com’s Pogchamps tournaments are boosting viewership, too. The tournaments are a competition where Twitch streamers best known for playing other games — often shooters or other action titles, like Fortnite or Call of Duty — try their hand at chess. These streamers introduce their own audiences to chess, which creates a domino effect, bringing more awareness to it. Young players can now play every day and watch their favorite streamers every night. Vasishta Tumuluri, a 15-year-old with 10 years experience playing the game, is one of those young players. He plays online nearly every day and keeps tabs on chess streamers when he can’t. Tumuluri is rated at 1,686 by the U.S. Chess Federation, at the time of this writing. He wants to be a grandmaster one day, and he’s plugged into the world of Twitch as another tool to get him there. “I watch streams four to five times a week, pretty much daily,” he said. “If it’s a streamer I like, I’ll watch.” Chess is usually a “silent, furious game,” and it’s refreshing to see streamers with a relaxed, cool vibe, says Tumuluri. “You see they’re not just a chess player. They’re also a person.” Add to that the fact these streamers can make a living from streaming now, and it’s easy to see why Barton thinks this is only the beginning of a new era for chess.
