I have a shield that serves two purposes. The first and most important reason was to upgrade to the older Steam Link to stream games from above and the second was to have a device that can do almost everything we need in terms of multimedia. As a gaming rig, the Shield easily delivers 4k 60fps with 5.1 surround sound from my high-end gaming PC upstairs via an ethernet cable. I use both Steam Link and a third party Moonlight app for this. Geforce is pretty good at the moment, but I only have the free version due to the lag on cloud-only games, so it's only really useful for the demo games you're interested in. On the TV side. I set up VLC to access media sharing on my computer so I can streamLAN content streams again without issue and surround sound works flawlessly. I know there are more impressive solutions like turning on Plex, but I rarely watch TV or movies, so this simple method worked perfectly for my needs. My girlfriend's main concern is getting the streaming services she uses on the Shield, which has mostly worked.
All the apps I needed were easy to find, except for All 4 and SoundCloud, which don't have Android TV versions. For most people, this won't matter much because the shield is stream content to from your phone. But my friend wanted a more comprehensive solution because she prefers to watch content on her TV rather than searching and streaming it on her phone (quite a lot). Android TV has limitations because not all apps you can get on Android phones will show up in the Google Play Store because they aren't supported (IE, developers don't care). Fortunately, installing apps with .apk files is very easy (look for sideloading), and you can try your luck by downloading and installing .apk files for Android phone apps to see if they work. I was able to get all 4 to work this way (even if the menu has the wrong aspect ratio, the content is fine) and I was able to get all 4 to work this way (even if the menu has the wrong aspect ratio, the content is fine) and I was able to get all 4 to work with the web browser app and just point it to the website. is actually fully functional as the Shield supports devices with a mouse and keyboard and being able to load apps means I can install SmartTube instead of YouTube (the ad-blocking YouTube app). The Tegra chip on the Shield also makes it a great emulation device, and I've tested the PS1 emulator with great success. The only downside here is that only 12GB of internal storage can be used, which is very limited for things like PS1 games. The only downside is the main menu displays. I know there is a workaround to disable the app launcher to get rid of the ads but Ia solution to this problem still needs to be found. In short: - Streams games great - Has all the streaming services we use (with a bit of tech magic) - Can surf the web and run streaming services like Soundcloud etc if you need it. â¢Åâ- Supports third-party Android apps like SmartTube via sideloading. â¢Åâ- Emulates like a pro â¢Åâ- Users can stream to it â¢Åâ- Has a fantastic Toblerone in remote control shape âÅâ- The way it can control your TV means you can ditch your TV remote and go all out with the Toblerone. "Small internal memory is a problem for larger game ROMs or app collections and the only way to expand it is via a USB flash drive (I wish there was a memory card slot)" - The main menu displays are frankly unacceptable for the device for the price, but it's not worth deducting a star and there is a workaround, I just haven't figured out how yet. www.NordicIPTV.shop www.PremiumPackage. shop www.ScandinavianIPTV.shop www.SuomalainenIPTV.com
